MAJOR MAGEE FORMING UNIT

148th Battalion to Start Work in a Week.

McGILL OFFICERS TO GO

Likely Major Magee Will Take
Many McGill Men and Also Several Officers.

When interviewed last evening by a representative of the Daily, Major Magee, second in command of the Mc-Gill C. O. T. C., confirmed the report published on Saturday that he would command the next battalion going overseas from Montreal. The official title of the battalion will be the 148th Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., and the present headquarters will be at the old Joseph House, headquarters of the C. O. T. C.

Major Magee has had a large and varied military life, and since coming to McGill, the latest of his activities in this field, he has won the admiration and respect of every student who has been in any manner connected with him. Although Major Magee stated that the duty of every McGill student was to join the Universities Company, yet, seeing that he has been so long connected with the boys of McGill, he will be only too glad to have as many McGill men as possible go overseas with him.

It is very probable that Major Magee will take a number of McGill officers with him, but no names can be mentioned at present.

The McGill C. O. T. C. is not the first of Major Magee's military activities. He first became interested when attending the London Collegiate Institute. Here he held the rank of captain in the Cadet Corps. Then for eight years he was respectively Lieutenant and captain in the 26th Middlesex Regiment. For two years he was aide-de-camp to the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Sir Mortimer Clark.

Major Magee joined the McGill C. O.
T. C. in 1910, being officer in charge of musketry instruction, and since then he has risen to become second in command of the McGill Battalion, which has, under his care, won a most distinguished reputation not only on this side of the water, but also in England as well.

Major Magee has always got on well with the students because he was once one himself, although McGill cannot claim the honor of ever having him as an undergraduate. He graduated in Osgoode Hall in '05. He also received the degree of B.A., Ad Eundem, from McGill last spring as a recompense for his untiring efforts in connection with the McGill C. O. T. C. Since coming to Montreal he followed his chosen profession, namely, law.

The work of the new battalion will commence in a week or ten days, when a class of instructors will be started, although active recruiting will not be begun for some time yet. A class will also be started for officers and for about thirty or forty selected men, who will be trained in the art of physical training and bayonet fighting. In this way every officer will be either a physical training or bayonet fighting instructor, so that each platoon will have either an officer or N.C.O. competent to instruct in both of the above-mentioned branches.

Major Magee stated that all appointments, both officers and men, will be only temporary, and their confirmation in rank will depend on their making good.

Major Magee intends to carry out in his new battalion the same system of training as he has done with the Mc-Gill C. O. T. C. during the past two sessions and with the summer auxiliary battalion. The officers will do everything in their power to keep up interest in the work by varying the close order drill and rifle exercises with practical outdoor work, as every student knows this method has proved most successful with the training of men in the C. O. T. C.

The scheme of recruiting which Major Magee intends to carry out will be as follows. He will go around to all clubs, societies, etc., where likely men are to be found, and will make his recruiting speeches now. He will ask the men to think over the question, and then if any decide to join to pick one from their number who will join at once and become versed in the ways of training recruits. When active enlistment commences the men will be put under the man which they picked and will be trained by him. In this way there will be an added inducement for men to join.

One important announcement which Major Magee made was that all the N.C.O. positions will not be filled at present, but the last man to join the battalion will have a chance to get his stripes, for, just as Major Magee said, "There is generally a corker joins at the last minute."

When joining, every man will be told what is expected of him, so that no man will have a chance to regret the conditions under which he enlisted.
The strictest discipline will be maintained in all ranks, and there will be no room for any slackers, but everybody will have to get busy and work to get the battalion into working order. Particular attention will be paid to amusements and comforts for the soldiers, so as to create esprit-de-corps in the battalion.

Already Major Magee has received

MAJOR GEDDES' OPINION.

Major A. C. Geddes, formerly professor of anatomy at McGill, who is now on the staff of P.M.
Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the British forces in France, in a recent letter, says that everything is progressing very favorably, and that all are confident of an early ending of the war.

several applications from C. O. T. C. men, and from members of the Auxiliary Battalion, who expressed the desire to serve in any capacity.

Although Major Magee stated that the place of every university man is in the University Company, yet here is a chance for every McGill man who intends going overseas in the near future to go under an officer which The Daily does not have to introduce to McGill men, but who has made himself so well known to them that his work is appreciated not only by the present student body and by the faculties, but in almost every letter from the front there is generally a word of praise from students for the man who taught them the principles of military training.

More announcements concerning the officers will be made in the Daily shortly.

CORNELL TEACHES POULTRY FARMING

Winter Course in Study and Care of Hens
Begins.

Announcement is made of the winter course in poultry husbandry at the New York State College of Agriculture and the college authorities say that there is a promising field of work open to men and women who complete the course. Under the subjects offered students have opportunities to develop plans for their own poultry business; they may prepare themselves for teaching or experimenting in poultry husbandry or they may study the management of poultry farms. It is stated that each student is placed upon his own resources and the opportunities for success depend largely on the ability of the individual.

The Cornell poultry course aims to train students in the practical handling of poultry and poultry products and an announcement from the college states the work includes feeding, house construction, incubating and brooding, breeding, caponizing, killing and picking poultry, candling, grading and packing eggs, use of machinery, construction of appliances, poultry accounting and poultry management.
The students have the use of the libraries of Cornell University, including those of the College of Agriculture, and of the poultry department, which contains most of the best books and nearly all of the important poultry periodicals.

Each student is placed in charge of a flock of hens, an incubator and a brooder and thus has an opportunity to actually do all the work involved in poultry raising under the close supervision of the instructor. The course is designed to occupy all the time of the student during his twelve weeks of attendance. Men and women from all walks of life have taken the courses.
Many of these students have had several years of commercial farming or teaching experience, and part of the value of the classes is said to come from the class room discussions, ample opportunity being given for the exchange of ideas and the consideration of practical problems and experiences.
Only those who have had the equivalent of at least six months actual farm experience are eligible for the course, so every one in attendance is likely to have a knowledge of the fundamentals of farming.

TO DISCUSS NEUTRALITY

The Inter-Class Debate Schedule Announced.

DISCUSSION ANTICIPATED

Lawyers, Meds. and Theologues to Participate in To-night's Programme.

An exceptionally interesting meeting of the Lit. is scheduled for this evening, when debates will be held upon subjects that are causing a great deal of discussion at the present time. Perhaps the one which will cause the most heated debate will be that between the Diocesan College and Law
'18 upon the subject, "Resolved that the U. S. is morally justified in adopting a neutral attitude in the present war." It is plainly seen what opportunity this subject gives to the debaters, for the United States is having a miniature warfare of its own on this very question. We have Mr. Ford (the man who makes the cars) advertising himself by spectacularly upholding the affirmative, while on the other hand Theodore Roosevelt, the man who signed the Hague Conventions, announces with all the vigor at his command that the United States has not lived up to its obligation and has consequently earned the disrespect of all nations. Which of these two persons are right will be decided this evening, and anyone attending the debate will probably hear many important phases of the question which our daily papers have failed to touch.

The two years in Medicine, '19 and '17, will demonstrate their oratorical powers in a debate upon an equally live topic: "Resolved that the commission form of government should be established in the city of Montreal." The municipal government of Montreal is a question which, unfortunately, is continually worrying the minds of its citizens, and it is a great relief to many to know that this matter is now going to receive proper attention. The 2nd year, represented by Messrs. H. M. Young and R. C. Leggo will uphold the affirmative; they will be opposed by Messrs. F. J. Sculby and J. R. Nugent, of Med. '17. This debate is an exhibition one and will have no effect upon the standing of the two teams in the inter-class league. Since the debate was arranged it has been decided to divide the classes into three groups and as these two teams are in a different section the result of the debate will not influence either team's chances.

The schedule which was promised in last Friday's Daily is printed below.
It has been impossible to assign all the subjects as yet, but this will be done in a very short time. The question of judges is also receiving the attention of the executive.

The Place of the University

The universities in England are generally looked upon as the coping stones to the educational system of the country. Within certain limitations this view is more or less correct, but it is not strictly so. The connection between the universities, more especially the older ones of Oxford and Cambridge, and the public or secondary schools and colleges is and has for long been intimate; there exists not only a network of scholarships which enables students of even slender means to attain to the crowning of the educational edifice, but the fact that the masters at the public schools are almost invariably men who have passed through the portals of a university, forms an additional tie.

There is, however, a link missing in the educational chain, and that link can only be supplied by a closer co-ordination of the primary and secondary schools; at the present moment there exists an overlapping of the elementary and secondary schools which is the source of regrettable waste of power. Many of the latter are dealing with children of an age which is better catered for in the elementary school, and it is now generally recognized that a truly national system will not be attained until immediate schools are provided between existing elementary and secondary schools. The universities will then be on the way to become, in a true sense, the crowning edifice of a national system of education; on the way only, because, notwithstanding the existence of so many scholarships, the cost of a university career at the older universities is still a barrier to many would-be students.

The importance of efficiency in the universities of any country cannot easily be exaggerated, for if that efficiency is weakened the general educational efficiency invariably reacts to it. The corporate life of the leading universities in England, which is such a valuable factor in mental training, has suffered from the war in a manner almost unparalleled in the social history of the country, and the fullness of that life can only be restored with peace. Not the least valuable feature of the training at Oxford and Cambridge is the residential life which brings together men of every class and gives to them a community of interest and a common bond which, by stimulating the imagination and broadening the outlook, provides them with a fuller perception and understanding of relative values.

For the younger universities, which are rendering important service as centres of advancement of knowledge and research, a great opportunity exists to add to the educational efficiency of the country. A large number of the professional and commercial classes do not enjoy the advantages of a university education, owing to their eagerness to make an early start in their careers. This might be remedied if these universities, or some of them, were to open their portals to students of a lower age than at present. In residential universities such a policy would doubtless entail a modification of disciplinary administration, but it would help to round off the educational system, and enable many to reap the advantages of a university career which they now miss.

Woman and the Law

Opposition to the right of women to become students of law and practitioners at the bar commonly comes from officials who either challenge the intellectual competency of woman and question the desirability, from the standpoint of society, of having her enter the profession, or from men in authority who, while not averse to woman as a jurist, advocate and counsellor, nevertheless insist that she must not be educated side by side with men, in the same classroom or lecture hall. The price of her professional training, they say, must be segregation.

Accepting as final a recent adverse ruling to this effect from the Harvard law school in response to the petition of graduates from several of the leading women's colleges, a school for women who wish to study law has been opened in Cambridge this autumn, with an enrollment which proves that there is a demand much more insistent than had been supposed. Teachers from the Harvard University school will give instruction. The system used will be the "case" method. In short, everything about the plan indicates that the initial conservatism of the university authorities is to be modified in time.

In the formal statement of the plans of the new school its administrative head stresses one aspect of the debatable issue which to-day counts for more than it formerly did. With women as well as with men there is a rising demand for instruction fitting owners of property and managers of business to keep the law. Woman, whether in trade or out of it, whether an heiress to much property or supervisor of the possessions of others, is coming to see the advantage of the sort of education in the fundamentals of law which a reputable special school may give. Moreover, many women who thus view their future duty come from sections of the community that are influential in endowing and maintaining

GRADUATES' DEPARTMENT

DR. ELLISON AND MAGIC

McGill Grad. of '73 Knows it From Beginning to End.

HAS A LARGE COLLECTION

Retired From Practice, Devotes His Whole Attention to Collecting Magicians' Wands.

Eminent in five M's—Medicine, Masonry, Magic, Mystery and Models—is Dr. Saram Richard Ellison, Med. '73, New York city, whose collection of things connected with the practice of the Black Art is the acknowledged peer of anything of the kind on the continent. Dr. Ellison has recently retired from the active practice of medicine, after serving for the last ten years as medical examiner and expert for the law department of the city of New York. He now devotes almost his entire attention to Masonry and Magic.

It was a peculiar hobby which Dr. Ellison, now in his 63rd year, chose for himself soon after his McGill days, but it is one in which he has made himself, through persistent effort, the leader so far as America is concerned. Becoming interested in Magic not long after leaving college, he rapidly acquired a knowledge of the fundamental principles of magic and their application to stage work, which gained for him regard as an authority on the subject. Possessed with a desire to get to the bottom of the whole craft, and to come into contact with the professional magicians, Dr. Ellison discovered the Martinis, the makers of magical apparatus, and through them came to know the magicians themselves. He has since retained the friendship of the latter, and is now a personal friend of all the leaders of Magic in both America and Europe. Some years later, Dr. Ellison suggested and carried through the organization of the Society of American Magicians, of which he was the first member and for several years treasurer.

In the meantime, Dr. Ellison commenced upon his task of collecting magic. At one time he had in his possession the most important private collection of books on the subject in existence. This may now be seen in the New York Public Library under the name of "The Saram R. Ellison, M.D. Collection." A request is provided for in Dr. Ellison's will to build up the collection and to hold it intact.

It was not only to books, however, to which the Doctor confined his attention. He has a collection of models of stage illusions and magical wands which fills an entire room and is undoubtedly the largest in the world. From a few pieces of a cigar box, cloth, glass and wire, Dr. Ellison commenced this collection by building in miniature such familiar illusions as the Galatea and Lunette. As time went on he added to these the newer tricks, until now his collection covers practically all modern illusions in addition to the standard principles. Some of these are life-size models, but the majority are but in miniature, though made exactly as the full-size apparatus. The collection of illusions comprises: Levitation (Kellar); Levitation (Ellison); Herrmann's Suspension, Galatea, Stella, Kellar's Blue Room, Pepper's Ghost, Mystery, the Protean Cabinet, the Decapitated Princess, Herrmann's After the Ball, Kellar's Cassian Propaganda, the Woman in the Case, Kellar's Fly-to, Kellar's Will, Witch and Watchman; the Morrill Cabinet, Thurston's Suspended Cabinet, Lunette, Noah's Ark, Kellar's Out of Sight, the Artist's Dream, Burmese Gong, the Bridal Chamber, the Cremation, the Revolving Auto, the Indian Box, Trunk Mysteries, Goldin's Cannon, Trunk and Lady, and thirty or forty others.

Dr. Ellison has also a collection of magicians' wands, 81 in number, souvenirs of most of the famous magicians of recent years, not alone of his day, but of an earlier period. The

LT. CURRIE ON WAR'S HORRORS

Difficulties Making an Advance "Tremendous and Costly."

WEATHER WORST ENEMY

McGill Graduate Thinks Conscription is the Only Solution of The Problem.

Lieut. George S. Currie, Arts '11, who went overseas with the Second Universities Company and is now in France with the P.P.C.L.I., writes a most interesting letter, under date of November 4, describing life at the front with the "Pats." He says:

"Your letter arrived just as Gregor Barclay and I were starting to walk into a large town near our billets. We always try to take advantage of every opportunity to obtain a good dinner and give the 'glad eye' to the females whose number is legion. It was the first afternoon for some time that it was not raining. This is one of a climate, cold and wet all the time and the mud inches deep.

"It was most amusing to us to read the Montreal papers, and in particular what they say about our battalion. Since about the middle of September they have been saying that we have been transferred to the Canadian division, and as a matter of fact we are still attached to a British unit, a brigade which has distinguished itself to a less extent than none other in the British army. It has impressed me how well thought of our regiment is by the British Generals.

"I have had on short visit to the trenches, about the middle of last month, just after we arrived; but since then we have been in rest billets, and, with the exception of a couple of hours' drill a day, if it is not raining, we do almost nothing but enjoy ourselves. It was very quiet in the trenches while I was there. I did not hear a peep out of the Bosches, but our artillery was giving their second line trenches some punishment.

"We were taken to an observation point on top of the hill, where we were able to obtain a splendid view of the whole scene of operations for several miles on each flank and to the front. I actually saw three Bosches through my glasses, and also a Bosche sentry upon one of the roads in rear of their lines. This is an experience which many a soldier who has been out here for some time has not yet experienced. It is very difficult to put on paper the impression I received of seeing several miles of country with lines of trenches running across it, without a sound except an occasional shrapnel shell bursting over the German second line trench. Not a living human being was to be seen anywhere, and yet there were thousands ranged not more than a hundred yards on the average from each other.

"The lines have been as they are with very little change for a whole year. We may see the end of the war yet if we do not die of old age. The difficulties of making an advance are tremendous and costly. The Canadian papers made altogether too much of the last little push. It was costly and the ground gained hardly noticeable, when you consider the whole battle front. The idea seems to me to hammer away, giving more than we receive. At present it is hard to see how a decisive victory is possible for either side. The Germans certainly can never win; I have not the least doubt of that, but it is rather doubtful as to whether we can obtain any lasting success. The modern engines of war and the new explosives invented have made a war between human beings almost an absurdity. It no longer depends upon the individual. The biggest battle we have to fight for the next few months is with the weather man. The conditions will not be as hard as last winter, but they will be severe enough to cause considerable casualties. If we are going to achieve success, I do not think that the troops who are to do it are in the field yet, and that is the worst feature of the whole business. The men at the front are doing their best and suffering unnecessarily while those at home are making up their minds to enlist. Conscription seems the only solution, and if we could have had it earlier, I think we would have been in a much better position now. Of course, we know nothing of the difficulties of equipping an army, and possibly they could not have equipped a larger army than we have now, even if they had the opportunity or the men to work on.

"To-morrow we are having a field day, regimental shoots, etc.—weather man willing, of course. To-day Gregor and I, with George McDonald and Philip Mackenzie, were practising throwing bombs. They do make one big mess of anything near them. I

C. M. CAMERON WRITES

News of Other Graduates and Past Students on Active Service Overseas.

C. M. Cameron, Sci. '15, now with the Princess Patricia's in France, writes:

"We are not doing very much now in the way of fighting Germans, being billeted in a town quite a piece back of the line.

"We are being given company drill and rifle exercises till we are black in the face, but it is smartening up the whole battalion, whether they like it or not.

"We have been dropped from our old brigade, and as far as I can make out, are to be an instructional battalion for a school of officers which is to be located here. The idea is not as welcome as it might be to most of the men, but then there is always the chance of its working out differently or, as they say in the army, you know what will happen when it happens."

DENIS BAKER WAS WOUNDED

Had Only Been in France About a Fortnight.

NOW IN LONDON HOSPITAL

Shot While Working With Party Erecting Entanglement at Night.

Two weeks after he landed in France, Lieut. Denis Baker, Sci. '15, of the Royal Engineers, is back in England with a thigh shattered by a German bullet. Lieut. Baker, who left here last spring to enter the Royal Engineers, was wounded while engaged in the building of wire entanglement. He writes as follows to a friend at McGill:

"I am at present lying on my back in a London hospital with a broken thigh. I had only been out in France about a fortnight when I got hit as I was putting up wire entanglements at night. It was quite a clean wound, and I hope to be about on crutches before Christmas. They will probably not send me out again till April, so that I shall fairly slack time.

"Massey (his brother) is somewhere out there in France and seems all right. He is H. Q. despatch rider. "Thanks for all the news of Old McGill. I met Bell-Irving, Eric Cresswell and Strachan right in the trenches practically. It's very funny how one hits up against them. The first two are Engineers like myself. I heard that 'Hippo' Horsey was in the Lord Mayor's procession the other day."

In a recent letter, Corporal C. de B. Bouthillier, Arch. '16, tells of being billeted at a Flemish farm house and of expecting to enter the trenches within a day or two. He is with the 5th Canadian Mounted Rifles and a son of C. F. Bouthillier, Law '67.

Flight Sub-Lieutenant Neil McDiarmid, a western boy, who was for a year with the class of Arts '17, spent the week-end in the city and renewed acquaintanceships. He is about to proceed overseas to enter the Royal Naval Air Service.

J. P. White, Sci. '18, was in the city over the week-end from Ithaca, N.Y., where he is training at the Thomas School of Aviation. A companion at the school is Allan Wilson, Sci. '18.

BORROW LT.-COL. HARRIS

Services of McGill Graduate Are Loaned to French Government.

Lieut.-Col. A. W. Harris, Vet. '90, veterinary officer in the Canadian militia, has been loaned to the French Government, and will leave for France in a short time to take up an important position in connection with the veterinary services there.

Lieut.-Col. Harris was connected with the local militia for some time before the outbreak of the war, and later inspected many of the horses bought for the Canadian and British Governments. He has been for some months inspecting horses for the French Government in Chicago and in different parts of Canada. His work has been so satisfactory to the French war office that an application was made for him to go to France, and has been accepted.

wands are chiefly those used by magicians on the stage; most of them are of wood, metal or ivory, but some, such as Alexander's the leg bone of a monkey from the sacred temple at Benares, are distinctly out of the ordinary.

Dr. Ellison has also gathered together the nucleus of a Masonic Museum, and "Doc's Den" is one of the show places for Freemasons. The McGill grad. is himself a 33rd degree Mason. He knows Magic from A to Z, and should be a handy man for any person in difficulty with regard to the every-day stage illusions and tricks.

SAW THE KING AT THE FRONT

Pte. Hugh B. Griffith Driving Dr. Macphail's Ambulance.

HAVE WARM, DRY HOME

Is Billeted in Cosy Flat Over a Store Room—Plenty of Warm Clothing.

The McGill boys with No. 6 Field Ambulance, Second Division, C.E.F., are having a remarkably fine time at the front, to judge from the cheerful note which Pte. Hugh B. Griffith, Arts '14, strikes in a letter just received by his father, Dr. A. R. Griffith, 221 Peel street. Pte. Griffith, who is engaged as driver of an ambulance under Dr. Andrew Macphail, Arts '88, Med. '91, speaks of passing King George and his staff previous to the King's unfortunate accident. He writes from Belgium under date of October 29:

"Several times lately I have had the rather unpleasant task of taking hopeless cases down to the C. C. S. On one occasion I had two patients, both very far gone. One died en route; the other probably lived only a short time.

"The last time I made the trip was the day that King George reviewed the Canadians. I had to travel down the road which he came up. This was barred to all traffic, but it was fine to see how quickly all barriers were removed when I said I had a dying man in my car. On the way back I saw the King's car go by. The day was fairly clear and cool, as good an autumn day as you get over here.

The road was fairly well lined with soldiers from the surrounding camps, who were off duty. For about half an hour several aeroplanes hovered overhead. The first sign of the King was the P. M. in a motor followed by three men on motor-cycles. Then came the King's car and a few others. With the King was the Prince of Wales, Sir John French, and part of his staff followed.

"I find it hard to write about our life here and let you have the idea that I am at the scene of a great war. We have a really cosy flat over a store-room, in which I sleep. We have a very efficient stove, and glass has been put in all the windows, so we are quite warm. In our room we have a table, a couple of benches and several comfortable chairs. We all have rubber boots, coats, etc., and plenty of warm clothes. Really, we have few hardships. When we go out we manage to keep fairly dry, and in any case always have a warm, dry home to come to. When I see the hardships the men in the infantry have to undergo, I feel a little selfish. It must be especially hard on them now, because we have had several days of continuous rain. There is a sort of picturesque side of our life as well. This afternoon we sang songs around our fire for an hour or more. One of our most popular songs says:

"When this cruel war is over,
No more soldiering for me."

"We all talk about what we will do when the war is over. Our chief interest in war news is the prospect of the war ceasing. Just now prospects are not very encouraging, but all are united and determined that peace can only come with victory to the Allies." lies."

BILLETTED IN A FACTORY

Pte. T. W. Brant Says Boys Were Glad to Have Bath After March.

The following are extracts from letters of Pte. T. W. Brant, former student of Macdonald College, written to his parents and sisters in Montreal. Pte. Brant is with No. 4 Co., P.P.C.L.I. 10-11-15

We are still on the move; did about 10 miles on Monday. We are billeted in a big factory here, which is warm, but dark. The great thing is that we just soaked ourselves in the hot water and after a change of clothes, I felt myself a new man.

We may be here quite a while—this place is a long way from the firing line. Of course, no one knows where we will go eventually, nor when we will go.

Is trade brisk in Montreal now? You would laugh if you saw the people in the little stores here—they are awfully slow, but are fond enough of money.

You know we are quite a long way from the trenches now. It is quite strange not to hear the guns booming. When we were billeted near the trenches last, the artillery were all around us and made a fearful noise at times. The trenches were only 1-2 miles from the village. This is a fine little place, on an important railroad. There are quite a few stores and cafes where we can eat. These restaurants do not give meals ready, but will cook food, if it is taken there, and I have had a few decent meals here—pork chops, salad, chips, etc., and all at a reasonable price. The only trouble is, we are nearly all "broke" and are anxiously awaiting pay-day.

12-11-15.

Here the weather is wretched—lots of rain and cold during nights. It is just like English winter weather.

At present we are in a fairly large village and live in a factory where we are dry and warm. At this place the workmen are busy with jute, which is dyed all kinds of colors. Most of the employees are girls, although there are a few old men and boys.

We have good fun here at times. Last Saturday our company held a concert. Some of us were dressed up and made a "band." There were three pretty "girls," Charlie Chaplin and some niggers. We managed to borrow the clothes from village people and with paint made quite a show. There were whistles, mouth organs, combs and biscuit-boxes for drums, etc.

PHOTOGRAPH WAS TAKEN.

The 73rd Battalion, C.E.F., had its official photograph taken on the campus at noon on Saturday. Several McGill men are in this unit.

PUBLIC IS INVITED

"Shock in Migration" Will be Discussed by Expert on Social Problems.

The Philosophical Society will hold an open meeting in Strathcona Hall this evening, the feature of which will be an address by Rev. J. S. Woodsworth on the subject of "Shock in Migration." Mr. Woodsworth, who is secretary of the Canadian Welfare League, is an expert on immigration matters, and his dealing with the above subject should prove of exceptional interest and practical value to all.

Mr. Woodsworth has gained considerable prominence around the university and in the city by his able manner in dealing with social problems, and his lecture of this evening, delivered under the auspices of the Philosophical Society, should attract large numbers.

The meeting is open to all. Members and non-members of the society are urged to be present, and a cordial invitation is extended to the general public, who will all be welcome. The meeting is called for 8.15 in Strathcona Hall.

RECRUITS FOR 5TH COMPANY

Sixteen Men Sworn In For the Company.

GOOD START MADE

Men From All Parts of the British Empire Are in the P.P.C.L.I.

Recruiting for the Fifth Universities Company has started in earnest. Already sixteen men have been sworn in and over a platoon are now on their way from the West. At present the roll shows the very wide prestige which is enjoyed by the Universities Companies, men from all parts of the British Empire and some from the United States are on its books. For the last four companies it has taken on an average eight weeks to recruit them to full strength, by present indications the Fifth Company will be recruited in record time.

The appointments for the officers of this Company have not yet been made public although it is expected that the staff will be announced within a few days. Captain A. S. Eve is in command of the Fifth Company as he also was to the Third and Fourth. It was very much due to the untiring efforts of Captain Eve that these last two companies were recruited and made efficient in such record time.

Among the men at present on the roll is William Leeman, of New Bedford, Mass., a typical soldier of fortune. He had seven years' training at the Pennsylvania Military Training School before he started his adventurous career. He served for one year in the U. S. army in the Philippine Islands, and he there saw the forms of warfare practised by the Aborigines of those islands. "Firing this, he joined General Villa's army in Mexico, and he remained there a year, helping to kill off a few of the surplus Mexicans.

Another interesting recruit is "Nick" Nicholson, of Arts '18, who has heeded to the call of his country, and is now going forth to help in crushing the influence of the central powers.

The men so far on the roll of the company are as follows:

Frank Egerton Vay, Kingston, Jamaica, aged 22, clerk.
B. W. Nyson, Tientsin, North China, aged 25, reporter.
W. J. Reynolds, Montreal, aged 21, insurance agent.
W. W. Bain, Edinburgh, Scotland, aged 36, clerk.
S. A. Saunders, Toronto, aged 23, music publisher.
G. A. Harris, Brantford, Ont., aged 39, salesman.
J. E. Drummond, Newcastle, N.B., aged 26, theological student.
T. G. Owens, Souris, P.E.I., aged 37, salesman.
S. M. Anderson, Montreal, aged 19, theological student.
R. C. McKellar, Gourock, Scotland, aged 25, accountant.
J. L. Roberts, Ottawa, Ont., aged 28, accountant.
W. W. Leeman, New Bedford, Mass., aged 25.
J. G. Nicholson, Montreal, aged 19, Arts student.
W. E. Dickson, Vankleek Hill, Ont., aged 20, farmer.

PRINCETON HELPS THE RED CROSS.

The local chapter of the Red Cross Society situated at Princeton University has started a very worthy campaign. All the prominent men on the Campus have been formed into a committee. The duty of this committee is to canvass all the dorms and clubs for old and discarded clothing. The clothing secured from the campaign will be sent to Europe to help relieve the privations of the destitute peasants. This is certainly a very good cause, and should receive co-operation from all sides.

GERMAN GUNS IN LONDON.

London.—There have lately been placed on the Horse Guards parade in London 22 German guns, together with three trench mortars, captured chiefly in the recent British advance at Loos. Three of them were captured as far back as August, 1914, at Le Cateau in the retreat to the neighborhood of Paris, but the rest still bear the signs of recent conflict. Most of the guns are of the 77 millimeter type usual in the German field battery, but there are two of slightly larger calibre, viz., 85 millimetre. These last two were taken by a battalion of a London regiment of Territorials, and are of considerable interest to the crowds of spectators in consequence. Though some of the pieces are minus their shields, none of them have been so injured that they cannot be easily repaired, a fact which seems to point to a rapid advance on the part of the British infantry, and the consequent surprise of the defenders.

NO MORE EXCUSES FOR CALIFORNIA STUDENTS.

The University of California has placed in an observatory, a Riefler clock, the most accurate timepiece known to science. This clock has been placed so that it is visible from all parts of the Campus. It is capable of measuring time to one hundredth of a second.

Things Theatrical

TWO STARS AT IMPERIAL.

Mme. Olga Petrova, who makes her first Canadian screen appearance at the Imperial this week in the Metro production of "The Heart of a Painted Woman," came to America from Warsaw, Russian Poland, six years ago to become the star of the Folies Bergere, and so great was her popularity that Winthrop Ames, one of America's foremost producers, launched her in his production of "Panthea" at the Booth Theatre, New York. Since that time she has gone forward until she occupies a unique position, after only three years on the dramatic stage. Mme. Petrova made her screen debut in "The Tigress," and she was immediately placed under contract to appear in a series of twelve Metro star-films, covering a period of two years. "The Heart of a Painted Woman," which comes to the Imperial on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is in five parts and two hundred scenes, and is said to be one of the most gripping and artistic of motion picture productions.

Pathe News of topical events and other pictures of the one-reel variety will also be shown.

The chief attraction for the last half of the week will be the William Fox version of D'Ennery's famous drama, "The Two Orphans," which differs radically from the stage version in power, life and color, and calls for the services of an exceptional cast, headed by Theda Bara and Jean Sothorn as Henriette and Louise, the two orphans. The part of Henriette is a radical departure from the vampire parts with which Miss Bara's name has become associated both here and in Paris, where she was the leading woman of the Theatre Antoine.

AT THE CANNAUGHT.

"The Money Master" is the latest addition to a long list of feature successes. It visits the Cannaught Theatre to-morrow, and is a rare example of the lengths to which film producers are going nowadays in their efforts to make each picture a greater
